"WINNERS of the WEST"

Episode Fifteen

"Unmasked"

ARTHUR'S horse, with a handkerchief on which he has written a message for help, arrives at the cabin of the Spaniard, and finds him engaged in desperate combat with another mysterious Spaniard who poses as him. John Standish quickly sends his double to rout. He reads the message on the handkerchief and rides to help Arthur and Betty. He arrives while Claire is still talking to the men. He helps Arthur and Betty to escape and then instructs them to ride back to San Francisco.

John Standish then returns to his mine. He finds his double measuring with gun lengths trying to find the hidden gold. Again he routs and pursues him—and the men who surrounded the shack to capture Arthur and Betty go back to San Francisco to find Louis Blair.

Blair is warned of their coming by an accomplice. He decamps with the money of the saloon, the money deposited with him by hard working miners. His theft is discovered. They pursue him, but he escapes. However, Arthur Standish confronts the false, mysterious Spaniard. After a terrific struggle the fake Spaniard is unmasked by Arthur Standish and is revealed as Louis Blair.
